TO KNOW, WATCH,

Caribbean queen!

The provocative popstar sizzles in the sand – and thankfully forgets her umbrella. And clothes...

Summer may have drawn to a close, but you can always count on the Caribbean islands to be sweltering for any sexy celebrities wishing to get away and flash the flesh.

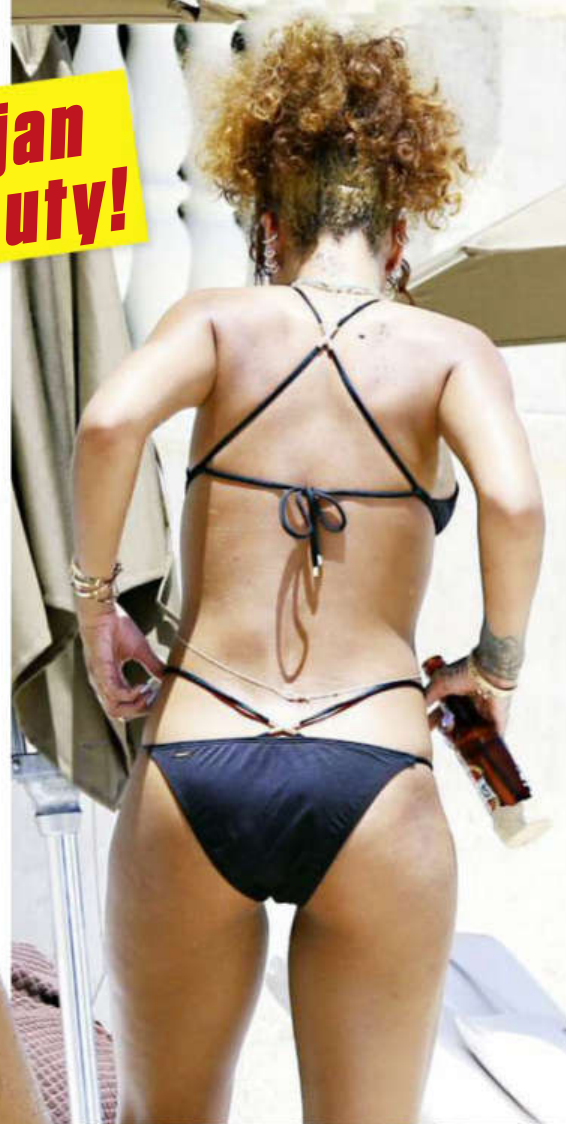

In this case, Bajan babe Rihanna jetted back home to Barbados for some cheeky fun in the sun.

The sexy singer followed it up by grabbing all the headlines for her incredible style choices while promoting her new fragrance and Puma clothing range at New York Fashion Week (right).

But the sultry singer wasn't just flogging her branded products. She still found time to watch Floyd Mayweather Jr's final fight against Andre Berto, so at least there was one knockout on display that night.

CREED SECRETS REVEALED!

ZOO's got all the insider intel on next year's massive Rocky reboot, as well as an exclusive chat with the film's big baddie, Scouse cruiserweight Tony Bellew!

→ Creed is in cinemas on 19 February 2016

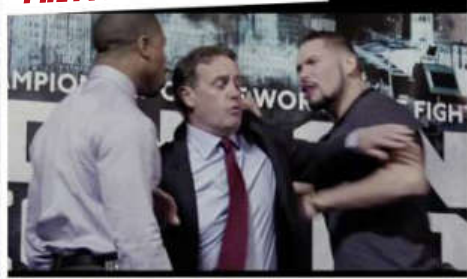

SEE THE TRAILER NOW AT ZOOTODAY.COM

The Rocky movie spawned five sequels over 30 years and now in Creed, Balboa (Sylvester Stallone) is back one more time to pass the torch to a new young fighter: Adonis Johnson (Michael B Jordan), the son of his old friend and rival Apollo Creed.

The latest trailer dropped last week and gave us our best look yet at the wealth of boxing talent stepping into the fictional ring. So we dug out as many film secrets from the trailer as possible, and even spoke to British powerhouse and Creed star Tony "The Bomber" Bellew, to bring you the inside track on next year's must-watch film.

"PRETTY" RICKY CONLAN!

Big, bad Bellew!

We've known for some time that big Tony was playing the role of Brit boxer "Pretty" Ricky Conlan, but now it's clear that Bellew will be the hero's big opponent, following in the footsteps of Dolph Lundgren, Mr T and Antonio Tarver.

The Liverpoolian gets plenty of screen time: trash-talking, a ring walk and knocking Adonis 50 shades of black and blue. Arguably, Tony looks like the best Rocky villain since Ivan Drago killed off Apollo Creed back in Rocky IV.

"Rocky's sick"

After so many brutal beatings in the ring, the Italian Stallion is aged and ailing, now taking on the same job as his former coach Mickey Goldmill. But in similar fashion to the straight-talking trainer in Rocky III, Balboa's health might be on the decline, leading to a stint in hospital. It could also be dire news for fans of the southpaw, as a rogue tweet from Stallone – featuring a glimpse of Creed's script – hints that Rocky could finally be out for the count...

ROCKY PASSING THE MANTLE!

ZOO EXCLUSIVE!

"I'm more realistic than Ivan Drago!"

Creed star Tony "The Bomber" Bellew tells ZOO about getting Everton in the script and trading blows with Michael B Jordan

GABRIEL ROSADO!

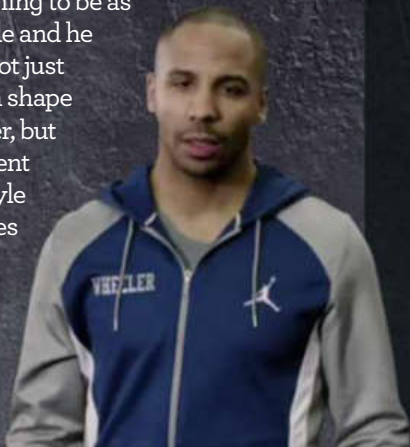

Gabriel Rosado!

The tattooed fella you see is former world middleweight title contender Gabriel Rosado, who says Stallone is the real deal in the ring: "He sparred with Joe Frazier and acts like a fighter on set. He's shadow-boxing all the time and I kept calling him 'champ' by accident!"

The Philadelphia-based fighter was also quick to praise Sly's advice: "He gave me plenty of help to keep me motivated and we shot this scene for 10 hours, take after take after take and I was fading bad. He said to do every take like it's your last, because you don't want to wrap it up and think, 'Damn, I didn't give it my all!'"

Yes, that's Andre Ward!

The unbeaten super-middleweight and Carl Froch conqueror pops up throughout the film and has been keen to praise Michael B Jordan: "He was phenomenal. He wanted everything to be as accurate as possible and he took it seriously. Not just getting his body in shape to look like a fighter, but learning the different nuances, the lifestyle and mindset it takes to box. He wanted to show why he took the part."

HI, TONY. YOU PLAY BAD GUY "PRETTY" RICKY CONLAN. DID THEY TELL YOU JUST TO BE YOURSELF?

Sylvester Stallone taught me a trick called substitution. You take the head off one person and replace it with the head of somebody else. So I just had to picture one of the people I really don't like in this world on Michael B Jordan's body, which wasn't too difficult.

WHERE DOES YOUR CHARACTER RANK IN THE PANTHEON OF ROCKY VILLAINS?

You couldn't say my name in the same breath as Ivan Drago, he was basically a human Terminator! If Rocky's fight against him was real it would have been stopped in the first 10 seconds. I'd say this movie has much more of a real-life cutting edge to it. When you see the storyline unfold, you'll think it could definitely be real.

DID YOU WRITE THE EVERTON LINK INTO THE SCRIPT YOURSELF?

"Pretty" Ricky Conlan's a Scouser and there was a lot of talk about if he would support Everton or Liverpool, but I told them I couldn't go back home if it was the latter!

DID YOU ALSO HAVE ANY SAY IN THE FIGHT SCENES?

The choreographer Clayton Barber created the fights in The Bourne Legacy, so he really knew his stuff. But this was his first boxing movie, so he ran things by all the boxers on set.

WAS IT HARD FOR YOU TO PRETEND FIGHT WITH ACTORS?

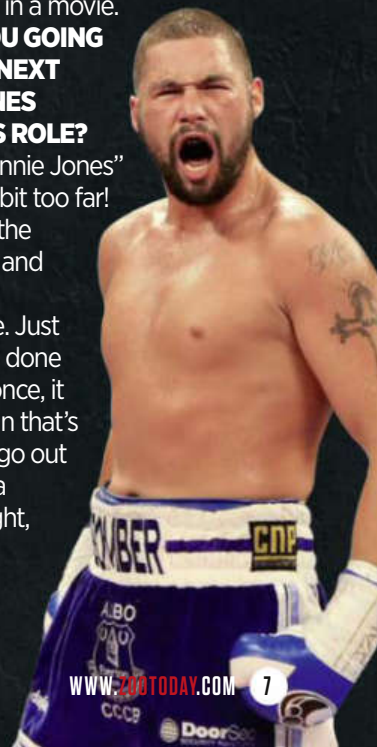

The fight sequences are fantastic and there are parts of our fight that are so close to the bone. I took numerous hits, Michael B Jordan took numerous hits and there were a few bruised ribs in there. The boxing was a lot of hard work and Mike really manned up and took to it great.

WE KNOW HOW MUCH YOUR PROMOTER EDDIE HEARN LOVES THE CAMERA, SO WAS HE IN TOUCH TO GET A CAMEO?

Ha ha. Eddie does love the camera! But he's too busy looking after the careers of Anthony Joshua, Luke Campbell, Kell Brook and myself to get involved in a movie.

SO, ARE YOU GOING TO BE THE NEXT VINNIE JONES AFTER THIS ROLE?

The "next Vinnie Jones" is taking it a bit too far! I'll see what the future holds and what comes of this movie. Just because I've done something once, it doesn't mean that's what I am. I go out dancing on a Saturday night, so does that make me a dancer?

ZOO'S ULTIMATE VERDICT!

PES 16 vs FIFA 16

The battle for No1 soccer sim is closer than ever. So we're settling the score to see who comes out on top...

WHO WINS?

Many years ago, when gamers still had to physically plug their control pads into consoles, Pro

Evolution Soccer was the undisputed king of football games. Then, just as Sheikh Mansour pumped his millions into Manchester City, FIFA's fortunes changed.

Now, with the introduction of the best PES game in years, could we witness another power shift? Controller in hand, ZOO sat down to rate this year's soccer sims...

PES 2016

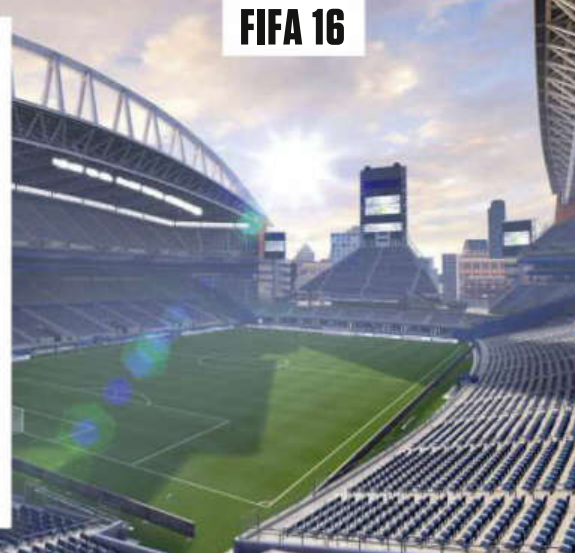

GRAPHICS

Both games have the odd hiccup or dodgy face, but Konami's new Fox Engine has done wonders for PES, bringing the game on a par with its rival for the first time in five years. FIFA, on the other hand, has smartly added a few incremental tweaks and animations, but it's hard not to feel it's treading water for the third year in a row.

PES 16 1 - 0 FIFA 16

Neither stands head and shoulders above the other, but PES' new engine wins out, simply because it could become even more influential if FIFA doesn't come out fighting.

FIFA 16

PES 2016

GAMEPLAY

FIFA is very much the perfect choice for the casual gamer, as anyone can pick up a pad and play regardless of age or experience. PES is the polar opposite: a slow-burning team game which has less goals, but offers more control, poise and authenticity to each match.

PES 16 2 - 1 FIFA 16

It's no snore draw, but it would be difficult to favour either title on this issue. Unless you're Sepp Blatter...

FIFA 16

PES 2016

PES 2016

PES 2016

PRESENTATION

Try as you might, it's almost impossible to look past the glaringly obvious lack of official names, badges and kits on PES. Who really wants to play "North London" vs "Man Blue"? Worse still for PES is the news FIFA has also brought a selection of women's national teams into the fold, too...

PES 16 2 - 2 FIFA 16

FIFA's slick presentation and lucrative UEFA license means this is an easy tap-in for FIFA.

SMART NEW FEATURES

Last year's input lag meant PES couldn't even get basics like passing right. Naturally, most of Konami's efforts have been fixing those big buggy issues. But FIFA – as per every year – has bolted on some great new tricks and one that stands out is the new "no touch" dribbling, which lets you travel with the ball without caressing it, leaving you to twist and turn opponents into oblivion.

PES 16 2 - 3 FIFA 16

Fixing the basics in PES has allowed FIFA to properly steal a march on its mortal rival in this area.

PLAYER INDIVIDUALITY

FIFA is faster, playing towards the game's patented hold-sprint-and-dribble style, but barring speed it lacks distinctiveness between one player to the next. PES, meanwhile, is built around individuality, and stars like Ronaldo and Lionel Messi – who are both on a different level – still feel completely unique when compared to one another.

PES 16 3 - 3 FIFA 16

There's nothing inherently wrong with FIFA's release, but PES offers a much deeper and rewarding experience with every single individual player on the pitch.

FIFA 16

FIFA 16

FIFA 16

THE FINAL SCORE!

PES 2016

FIFA 16

3 : 3

Both are four star-worthy – FIFA for the casual gamer, PES for purists – but if you were to push us, PES wins on penalties!

→ PES 2016 is out now and FIFA 16 is out on 24 September, both on PS4, PS3, Xbox One, Xbox 360 and PC

ENGLAND VS WALES BLUFFER'S GUIDE

RUGBY WORLD CUP PREVIEW!

Caught up in the hype about the clash between the hosts and Wales, but still confused by it all? Here's everything you need to know to get through the game without looking like a rugger novice (possibly)

Why is this such a massive game?

Well, Wales vs England is traditionally a huge rugby match, the equivalent of a clash between two giant football nations, like Wales and Germany. As these two face a battle to get out of Pool A – or at least avoid a clash with the All Blacks – this is winner takes all (or, let's face it, winner takes second). At least it can't be any worse than Roy Hodgson's mob at Brazil 2014.

Hang on – why isn't this at Wembley?

Because Twickenham – the 82,000-seater stadium in West London, which has the highest proportion of Barbour shooting jackets and Hunter wellington boots outside of the Cheltenham Festival – is HQ for England. Meanwhile, Wembley's famous arch has been reserved for rugby titans like New Zealand, Argentina, Ireland and, er, Romania (yes, it has a team).

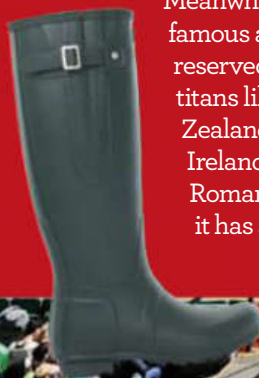

What's all this “bread of heaven”, “Delilah” and “chariots” business?

Bread of heaven (actually called Cwm Rhondda) is not a reference to the local Greggs, but a Welsh hymn sung by rival fans – and copied by every sports fan ever since (you're not singing any more)! Delilah is a classic Welsh song by Tom Jones, who is scientifically the most Welsh man who's ever existed. Meanwhile, Swing Low, Sweet Chariot is the England fans' unofficial anthem since a group of choirboys serenaded the side during the 1988 Five Nations. Now also the preferred anthem of red-faced bankers and public schoolboys called Rupert and Giles.

Who is Prince Harry supporting?

Officially, he's Prince Henry Of Wales. Unofficially, he's been England's biggest source of replica kit income over the past decade. Which means he will be diplomatically wearing a suit – with an England replica shirt underneath.

SATURDAY
26 SEPT RUGBY WORLD CUP
England vs Wales
7.15pm, ITV

We know Wales are No1 at football – but do they like the rugby over there, too?

Yes. In the years before Wales had The Greatest Football Team In The World™ – possibly of all time – they also had a passing interest in the game of rugby. Some might even say it was their national sport, providing a selection of the greatest players the world has ever seen. If you want to make a Welshman cry, just mention JPR Williams, Gareth Edwards and Jonathan Davies. Works every time...

Why are a load of burly Welsh blokes dressed up as flowers?

They're daffodils, the national emblem of Wales. This is more a factual reason than a justification. Obviously, they look ridiculous.

Hold up: why are the fans allowed to drink in their seats during the match?

Because rugby fans can be trusted to drink 14 scoops throughout the action, sing songs with their rival fans, strip naked in the local All Bar One and streak down Richmond High Street, all without resorting to the behaviour usually associated with "soccer" fans.

Righto. Finally, why is the ball shaped like an egg?

OK, you just don't get it, do you? Can we suggest you give up and head home to watch Celebrity Big Brother or something?

Do you have a vampire squirrel in YOUR garden?

Scientists on a South Asian island believe they've discovered a species of blood-sucking squirrel that feeds on small animals.

So, is the fluffy rodent at the end of your garden an undead creature of the night? Take our test and find out...

When you look out at your garden do you see:

A Grey squirrels scurrying around, chasing each other up trees and generally being pointless.

B Conspicuously nothing at all, except at night when you notice red eyes watching you from the treeline.

Do the trees near your house contain either:

A Twigs, leaves and moss, intricately woven together to form small nests.

B Tiny mahogany coffins, decorated with over-elaborate symbols.

Squirrel: Possibly a vampire

When you approach them, do your squirrels:

A Absolutely sh*t themselves and remain motionless.

B Boldly stare you down before letting off a high-pitched squeal and transforming into a bat.

Q: When you put your moggy out at night, do they:

A Stroll in the next morning, stare at you blankly before yacking up a big furball on the carpet.

B Return with two puncture holes in their neck, looking more p*ssed off than when you got them snipped.

Q: When investigating holes in your lawn, do you find:

A A gathering of nuts, berries and bird seed pinched from neighbours' gardens in the run-up to winter.

B A disturbing collection of small bones, teeth and the dog tag from Colin the Yorkshire Terrier, who went missing three doors down.

MOSTLY As = You've nothing to worry about. It's another pointless, quivering grey squirrel MOSTLY Bs = Panic! You might have a Borneo Vampire squirrel. Bathe yourself in garlic, stock up on holy water and superglue a cross to your front door before you become its next meal-pronto!

GODZILLA!

Turns out mutant fish are scarier than a dressing down from Simon Cowell...

You can regale your mates with stories of the whopper you hooked in the Lake District, but it will never come close to this enormous catch.

Fisherman Hirasaka Hiroshi last week landed himself this enormous Japanese wolffish while angling on Hokkaido island, reeling in the beast just north of mainland Japan and several hundred miles from the Fukushima nuclear plant.

However – if you think that sounds fishy – wait until you learn that this two metre-long monster normally grows no larger than half this size. Even more bizarrely, this species rarely ventures this far inland and surely offers some proof that larger than life creatures are on the up!

Let's hope someone has their binoculars at the ready and the National Guard are on speed dial should any supersized reptiles head towards Tokyo...

Frankfurt Motor Show

Super luxurious SUVs, bonkers Bugattis and fire-breathing Ferraris are set to spice up our streets in the coming years...

Traditionally, Frankfurt sees the big German brands battle it out to see who has the most impressive stand. It's a massive and very expensive willy-waving contest, and this year was no different.

But among the BMWs, Porsches and Mercs were a selection of hotly-anticipated SUVs, a hint at Bugatti's Veyron successor and a number of hot sports cars to get your Christmas list off to an early start...

WORDS: Leon Foulkney

Bugatti Vision Gran Turismo concept

Here it is: Bugatti's latest jaw-dropping offering that gives us a smashing insight into what the long-awaited Veyron successor could look like. This concept was designed for Gran Turismo owners to virtually enjoy but the awesome styling cues are likely to appear on the upcoming, road-going Chiron. Excited much?

Kia Sportage

Even "affordable" brands are now vying for a slice of the luxurious SUV pie. Granted, the new Sportage won't boast the same levels of grandeur and refinement as the big Bentley or Maserati, but you have to hand it to the styling department: they've done a stellar job. Re-designed light clusters, a liberal use of chrome, a new grille and the latest infotainment system will greet customers next year, as will mud-plugging all-wheel-drive.

Alfa Romeo Giulia

Alfa is determined to get its mojo back and the drop-dead gorgeous Giulia looks set to get the ball rolling. The top-spec Quadrifoglio Verde (Cloverleaf) version is geared to give the BMW M3 a scare, with 503bhp from a 3.0-litre bi-turbo V6 ensuring it rockets from 0-62mph in 3.9-seconds. It looks like the red-hot saloon market has got a new non-Teutonic contender.

Porsche 911

You'll have to break out the magnifying glass to notice the subtle styling changes in the updated 911, but the most important factoid is all engines will now be turbocharged. The entry level Carrera has a brand new 3.0-litre twin-turbo unit, which develops 365bhp, 20bhp more than its predecessor. Where does that leave the 911 Turbo? Who knows. Maybe they'll call it the 911 Bloody Mega Turbo, or something.

Mercedes-Benz C-Class Coupé

The C-Class was once the travelling salesman's car of a choice, a vehicle that would easily blend into a crowded motorway and attract little attention. Those days are gone, because the latest offering is one sleek and curvaceous machine bound to swivel heads. Yes, there will be plenty of vanilla petrol and diesel engine choices kicking off the range, but AMG will almost certainly step in, stick a twin-turbo V8 in it and create a machine that eats rear tyres for a living.

Say hello to the topless version of the 458 Italia – and the most powerful drop-top Ferrari on sale. Its 3.9-litre twin-turbo V8 develops 660bhp, enough to propel this beast from 0-62mph in just 3.0-seconds. Expect it on roads

ALBUM OF THE WEEK!

Disclosure Caracal

As summer draws to a close and we prepare for the “coldest winter in 50 years” (© every news report in the entire country), it’s comforting to welcome Disclosure’s long-awaited second album.

Named after an exotic African lynx (the animal, not the deodorant), it features collaborations with artists like Drake’s protégé The Weeknd and Lorde, which will no doubt secure the Surrey-born duo another chart-topping position.

What really warms the cockles though is the fact the sound isn’t too far removed from 2013’s breakthrough release Settle, which will please the bucket-hat, Nike Huarache-sporting fan base.

The domain of the night hunting feline is reflected in the bass-heavy opener Nocturnal, and one thing is certain: with catchy vocals layered over deep house rhythms aplenty, Caracal is a burst of Indian summer warmth that not even the strongest autumn breeze could dampen.

While he knows he shouldn't be in Carver's employ, Dennis is desperate. As tension mounts and the requests get nastier, his domestic dream gets further out of reach. ★★★★★ of the week!

Madden NFL 16

The popularity of American football is growing rapidly in this country, and while rugby games have fallen further behind and FIFA has stalled somewhat, it would appear as though EA Sports has pulled out all the stops to ensure it nails Madden. Well, mission accomplished.

The most significant improvement has come from Madden's drastically improved throwing and passing game. It ramps up the potential risk, reward and realism of the game in ways that had eluded previous versions. There's even a new "Draft Champions" mode to get to grips with – a welcome online hybrid of fantasy football and FIFA's Ultimate Team, which should remove those dry sessions playing the same top-tier sides over and over again.

Above all, it's clear that throwing around the pigskin's never felt so good! ★★★★★☆

The Hot List

Swim Deep Mothers

This long-awaited second album from Swim Deep is a great effort, with the funky To My Brother and the eight-minute epic Fueiho Boogie the tunes that'll be grooving their way out of your speakers. There's a synth pop feel and soothing riffs to the album, with Heavenly Moment perfect for when you're playing an intense game of FIFA 16. ★★★★★

MUSIC!

Skepta The Tim Westwood Mix

Nineties British hip-hop legend Tim Westwood has collaborated with Skepta, Britain's biggest hip-hop artist of the century, to create a 19-track mixtape. Stand out song is a remix of Jamie xx's I Know There's Gonna Be (Good Times). But, if you can see past Westwood shouting his name for no reason, you'll love all of it. ★★★★★

MUSIC!

Kwabs Love And War

Sam Smith was the obvious choice to sing on Spectre, but do you know who wasn't far behind him? London-born soul singer Kwabs. His debut album does well to expose his talent, but it's riddled with tracks that don't quite hit the mark. Father Figure mars the modern vibe he effortlessly creates, while My Own sounds like an old Mis-Teeq track. ★★☆☆☆

MUSIC!

Pumped BMX+

Regular mobile gamers will be well aware of this handheld title's addictive gameplay, and now it's making its way to consoles with 50 courses, 500 challenges and a slightly improved look. However, the bottom line is this: it's great fun, incredibly easy to pick up and perfect for anyone looking to escape the wealth of 20+-hour games currently hitting the shelves. ★★☆☆☆

HI, ABIGAIL! IT'S GREAT TO FINALLY HAVE YOU IN THE UK...

I'm so excited to be here! I've never actually left America before coming on this trip, and to be shooting for my favourite weekly men's magazine: I couldn't be happier!

HOW HAS OUR COUNTRY BEEN TREATING YOU?

London has been amazing. I came here with my girl friend, Rosie Roff, who's originally from Britain, so she's brought us to meet a load of her friends over here and took us to loads of great places!

WHAT'S BEEN YOUR FAVOURITE PART SO FAR?

I love everybody's accent, because they're so different from what I hear everyday. I actually love it and think it's very sexy when a guy has a British accent. I'm leaving soon though, so you'll have to hurry up, guys!

HAVE YOU DISCOVERED JELLIED EELS YET?

I don't think I'm going to want to try them, am I? [Abigail takes to Google] Ew, that's gross! Oh my god, I'm never eating that!

YOU'VE ALMOST BROKEN THE INTERNET WITH SOME OF YOUR INCREDIBLE INSTAGRAM VIDEOS...

My boob bounce is the one that everybody still talks about, but the one I love is my car wash video. Who doesn't love a girl with big boobs in a tiny outfit washing a car?

YOU ENDED UP WASHING A MINI COOPER. WASN'T THERE A FLASHIER CAR AVAILABLE IN LA?

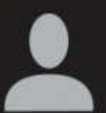

Ha. I came up with the concept on the day we were shooting, and we were texting everybody we knew with nice cars. My friend [Instagram star] Dan Bilzerian was out of town but offered to get his friend to drive a nice one over, but the video wasn't really about the car...

YOU'RE NOT WRONG THERE! YOU MUST HAVE A PRETTY IMPRESSIVE PHONEBOOK. WHO IS THE ➔

“The most famous person
in my phonebook?
Vin Diesel!”

MOST FAMOUS NAME IN IT?

Jesus, definitely not Dan Bilzerian! He's a nice guy but I've got way more famous people in my phone. Vin Diesel is a super nice guy, but he's actually very down to earth considering how famous he is.

DO YOU HAVE ANY FAMOUS FOLLOWERS ON INSTAGRAM?

Yeah, I've had some American athletes follow me but the guy you'll probably know best is Jeremy Piven, who plays Ari Gold in Entourage. He's even liked a few of my pictures!

WE BET. DID YOU KNOW IF ALL OF YOUR FOLLOWERS WERE A COUNTRY, IT WOULD BE THE 150TH BIGGEST IN THE WORLD? YOU'D BE BIGGER THAN LATVIA!

I'm happy so many people think I'm worth following! I try to put out good pics to keep people interested. Including the Latvians!

HOW DO YOU DO THE PERFECT INSTAGRAM SELFIE?

I'll go over by a window and do a certain head tilt and something with my eyes that only I know how to do. Then I make sure I'm fluttering my eyelashes and have plenty of cleavage on show to make it sexier!

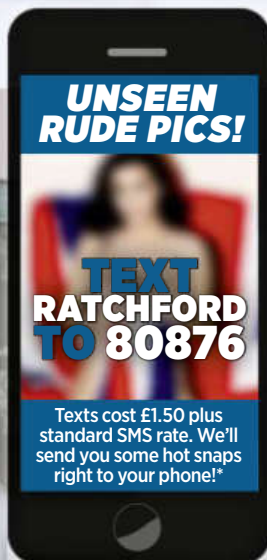

DO YOU HAVE TO CURB YOUR POSTINGS ON NIGHTS OUT?

Yes! I usually tell my friends to turn phones off after 1.30am, because nothing good can come of it when we're out having drinks and we think it's funny to post something. Then the next morning, we work out ➡

I love to play beer pong – I'm actually really good at it. When I was in college, I always used to play with my roommates and I was undefeated. Nobody could ever beat me!

WHICH BRITISH MODELS ARE YOU A FAN OF?

Lucy Pinder is incredible. I didn't know this, but she's actually in LA at the moment, but I've followed her forever. When I'm thinking of the perfect curvy Brit, she's the one I've always looked up to.

FINALLY, CAN YOU BRING YOUR FELLOW INSTAGRAM SENSATION LINDSEY PELAS WITH YOU WHEN YOU'RE NEXT OVER?

Oh definitely – we love shooting together and we're like best friends since she moved to LA a year ago. I'll definitely bring her over with me when I come back to the UK – just for you, ZOO!

BRAZIL'S KILLER COPS!

The Brazilian Special Operations police unit was supposed to put an end to the country's shocking death toll. Instead, it added to it...

Brazil's drug underworld is at breaking point. One person is shot dead every 30 minutes in Rio de Janeiro alone and the country's elite taskforce – BOPE (Batalhão de Operações Policiais Especiais) – was created to put an end to matters.

But their normally secretive ops have come under public, Government and international scrutiny, with 1,519 unlawful killings attributed to on-duty officers. With the Olympics less than a year away, ZOO investigates the rise of Brazil's killer cops...

WORDS: Joe Barnes
PICS: Getty Images, Corbis, PA Photos

Another gun fight, another victim

The most efficient force in South America

BOPE was a taskforce set up in 1978 to free Brazil's 960 favela communities from organised crime. The highly trained outfit comprising of roughly 400 members was said to be the most efficient military force in Latin America, experts in urban warfare as well as working in the confined space of the shanty towns.

They now have access to firepower far in excess of regular law enforcement officers, including armoured vehicles. But with free reign to enforce the law in whichever way they see fit, in 2013 things came to a head as the country went into meltdown.

Cops that kill

After a spate of killings before the 2014 World Cup – including the execution of bricklayer, Amarildo de Souza, who was classified as “missing” for more than two months – Rio's poorer favelas were hit by violent riots. The suspicious circumstances surrounding De Souza's disappearance and the notorious reputation of Rio's policing tipped locals over the edge, driving them to violence that forced the Government to investigate.

It was revealed the father of six had left his home to buy seasoning for some fish he'd caught when he was picked up in a routine sweep. But what happened next shocked residents.

De Souza was subjected to a violent interrogation including electrocution and suffocation, which eventually lead to his death. Ten officers were arrested and charged with murder after it was found they'd paid off locals to help them fabricate a story to cover their own crimes. It was then discovered many of the officers involved in the killings were actually members of BOPE...

Violent and aggressive tactics

The unlawful killing lead to Brazilian officials issuing reports on their investigations. They suggest that, with the police largely underfunded and battling some of the most violent street gangs in the world, their officers will often use excessive force to try to quash the problem rather than solve it.

This was evident when an escaped criminal was shot dead

Casualties of war

income with top targets being put out for tender at around £3,500.

It has also been reported in the local Brazilian press that it is not only criminals auctioning off their dirty work: even regular business owners are paying out to have off-duty or retired police take care of the petty thieves and disturbances at their businesses.

All the police

ask for in exchange is total anonymity – and money.

How high does the corruption go?

With the problem of police killings persisting, and the favelas wracked with fear ahead of the Olympics, human rights group Amnesty International recently decided to step in to raise awareness of the issue.

Their research showed there was evidence to support that one-in-six killings committed by the military police showed signs of extrajudicial execution. While the Government publicly displays a tough stance in ending “death squads”, members have come out to say they don't fear arrest as many of their bosses and the investigating officers are actually part of the corrupt movement.

With Rio 2016 on the horizon, this is a crisis that seemingly has no instant fix...

HEY, SOPHIE, WELCOME BACK TO ZOO. DID YOUR LAST SHOOT EARN YOU ANY FAMOUS FANS?

It 100 per cent made me new fans. The magazine made its way around the Chelsea changing room and I'm convinced Jose Mourinho has it up on his wall! I actually saw him in the gym the other day – he gave me a cheeky wink and said, "Hello!"

CHELSEA AREN'T DOING VERY WELL AT THE MOMENT. DID HE ASK YOU TO DROP IN TO GIVE THE TEAM SOME MOTIVATION?

You know, I was thinking that after Everton beat us. We're really not playing well at the moment, so I think I need to go in there and give them a few words of encouragement. ➔

SO, WHAT WORDS OF ADVICE WOULD YOU OFFER THE PLAYERS RIGHT NOW?

I'd just tell them, "YOLO". They're all thinking about it too much and concentrating too much. I'd definitely just take the team out for some fish and chips to cheer them up.

YOU SEEM VERY HAPPY TO HAVE THE FOOTBALL BACK, BUT HOW DID YOU SPEND YOUR "PRE-SEASON"?

Just like a footballer, really. I went on holiday, chilled out and caught up with my friends and family – basically all of the things I don't have time to do while the football season is in full flow. I went to Las Vegas this year, which was great!

DID YOU RETURN TO "TRAINING" WITH ANY INJURIES?

Funny you should say that...

GO ON...

On my second from last night I did get extremely drunk – probably the drunkest I've ever been – and ended up slipping in the bathroom and knocking myself out. It's left me with my new trademark scar in-between my eyes.

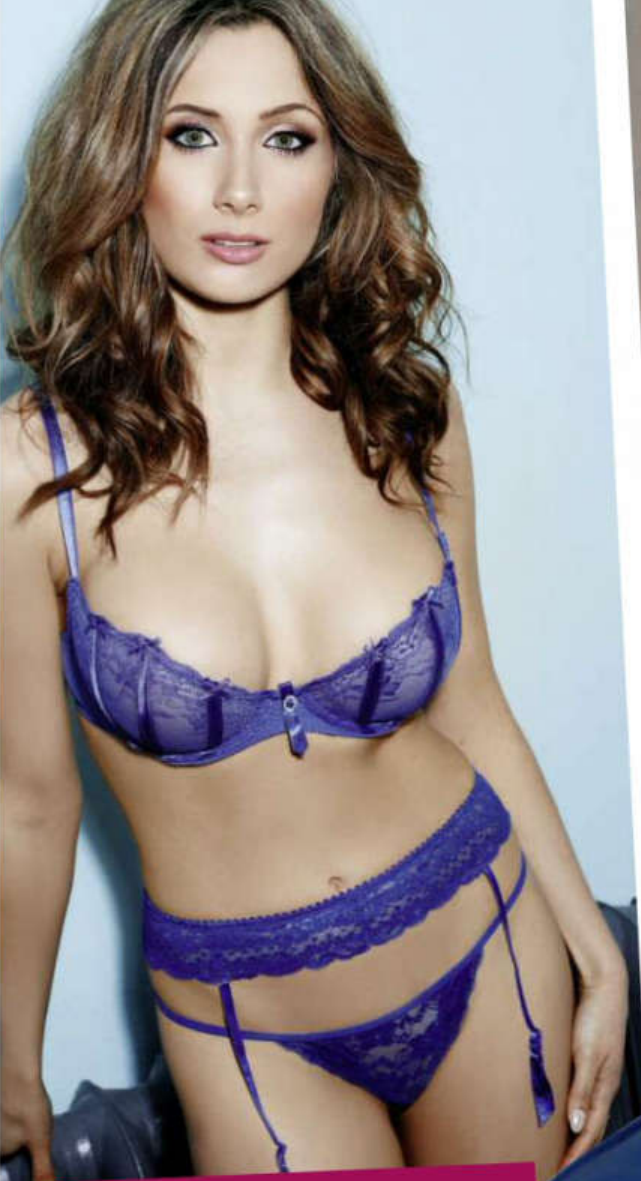

WE HOPE THERE ARE NO REPEATS WHEN YOU'RE FOLLOWING CHELSEA IN EUROPE...

Nope! We've got Porto at the end of September and then Tel Aviv in November to look forward to. It's great to get away for a couple of days and have a few drinks – maybe it's our year to win the Champions League!

HAVE YOU LEARNT HOW TO ORDER A BEER IN EACH LANGUAGE YET?

Yeah, but to be honest we tend to just order in the Jagerbombs. On the last trip we ordered 28 and these trips will be 29 and 30 – but don't worry, we'll be handing them out to the other Chelsea fans in the bar! ➔

“I’ll wear a bikini to our next Euro away game”

“I can catch a ball on my boobs. I bet Diego Costa can’t”

SO YOU'RE GETTING LOTS OF ATTENTION WHILE YOU'RE OUT NOW?

Yeah, like I've said before, football and boobs are the best two things that go together. I've had people stop me on busy streets in London and say, "Hello – up the Blues". I even had a lovely American who had flown over to see a game without tickets turn up outside my house to tell me he was a massive fan.

INTERESTING. HAVE YOU LEARNT ANY NEW TRICKS SINCE WE LAST SAW YOU?

I've been working on my kick-ups. I can now catch the ball on my boobs if I squeeze them together. I think that's quite a cool talent – I'd like to see Diego Costa challenge me at that one.

BEFORE YOU GO, WE CAN'T HELP BUT REMIND YOU THAT YOU HAVE TO WEAR A BIKINI TO YOUR NEXT EUROPEAN GAME...

Ha. I posted a picture on Instagram and said if it got loads of likes I'd wear a bikini to our next European away game, but then we got knocked out of the Champions League. I was hoping everyone had forgotten... but now I'll have to wear one as promised!

THE BEST, BIGGEST AND FUNNIEST STORIES FROM THE WORLD OF FOOTBALL

The making of Sergio Agüero!

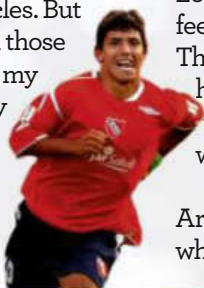

“Getting to Manchester was hard, playing here is easy!”

The Argentine hitman charts his journey to becoming the deadliest striker in the Premier League

Overcoming obstacles

“The journey from being a kid dreaming of the national team to being a professional footballer living in and playing for Manchester City was a long and hard one, and there were obstacles. But I’m happy that all those obstacles were in my way, because they made me stronger.”

“Moving to Europe in 2006 was an important step for my career and I will always be proud of myself for managing to make that move at 18.”

Starting young

“I was only 15 when I had my debut for Independiente. Looking back at it today, it feels crazy how young I was. The expectations were very high because I started so young, and the pressure was hard to deal with.”

“I got called up to the Argentina senior squad and when I came back to Independiente I got dropped to the youth team, so that was a big blow. But I always believed in myself and that’s what kept me going.”

Football mad

“My attitude got me to the position I am in now. No matter what day, what mood, what weather, what circumstances, I always played football, because it was the one thing that made me happy and gave me hope. You have to believe in yourself and never give up.”

“One trick is to not tell everyone about your dream, because people can be judgemental, which can have a negative impact on your motivation.”

Relishing the big moments

“The most exciting goal I have ever scored was the one in injury time against QPR in May 2012 that led us to win the Premier League title for the first time ever.

"These are the moments I train hard for every day, to be able to score, to be awake and make an impact in the game, even after 90 minutes on the pitch. Days like these are the pay-off for the hard work we all put in."

No carbs before matchday

"That is why my diet is so vital, so I can be physically strong and absolutely fit to be able to last 90 minutes, and more. I try to eat healthily all year round, and drink at least three litres of still water every day. I love pasta, but I need to cut down on that as too many carbs conflict with my need for speed. Because of that I try to combine chicken or fish with vegetables and salad."

Manc humour

"The people in Manchester, and their love of football make my job easy. Of course they are quite different to Argentinians, but I really like their sense of humour and friendliness, and the general atmosphere in the city is always good. It rains a lot here, but they don't care.

"People in Manchester take things as they are and make the best of it. They have a good attitude to life."

Sir Clive Woodward's guide to making a winning team!

The only England coach to lead the Red Rose to the promised land lays out his formula for current incumbent Stuart Lancaster

Face up to the press

"Working in the media now, I get to see things from the other side of the fence. One of the secrets to having a harmonious World Cup squad is to work closely with the media, especially when things don't go well. Anyone can deal with the press when you're winning, but when you lose you've really got to face the inquest and be brutally honest. There's no point in trying to pull the wool over the media's eyes, because they will always find out."

Throw the kitchen sink at it

"You don't win the World Cup with Churchillian speeches. As England coach, your job is to make sure the team is at the leading edge in everything they do and make the players the best in the world. Running a rugby team is not a perfect world: things will go well and things will go wrong, but if you throw the kitchen sink at it and explain yourself every time, then you'll get the best out of the players."

Don't ban Twitter or Facebook

"I'm very pleased social media wasn't around in my day. Mobile phones can be a lethal weapon in the wrong hands in a high profile team, and I saw it when I worked with Team GB during the Olympics in 2012. When I was England coach, there was no Facebook or Twitter and we all got on pretty well as a group, so how much those things are needed I don't know. But you can't police players using their phones. It comes down to a matter of trust."

RUGBY WORLD CUP
ENGLAND vs WALES

Be prepared to kick players out

"Even in 2003, we spent a lot of time talking about players' behaviour when they were off-duty. They are role models and they're representing the team 24/7, 365 days a year, especially now with camera phones everywhere. It's a case of everybody being very professional; if they can't do that, then they've really got to question what they're doing in the team. If you can't behave then leave the group and we'll bring in somebody else. We were pretty clear about that."

Turn away friends and family

"Playing at home is a huge advantage, but it can easily become a disadvantage if factors around it are not managed properly. Like with the athletes at London 2012, they'll have friends popping up everywhere who want to see them or want tickets. Opportunities to be distracted during a home World Cup are huge and you don't want to be rude but you have to be very firm to nip them in the bud."

Make leaders

"With the pressure England will be under as the host nation, leadership will be paramount. On or off the field, there's pressure everywhere and you're not just looking for your key players to lead, but every player. If one player doesn't front up properly on Saturday, that can cost you the game. History shows us there's not much scope to lose games in the World Cup and still go on to win the tournament."

"I'm watching tapes of Chudinov, not Rocky!"

Ahead of his world title challenge, Britain's very own Italian Stallion Frank Buglioni tells ZOO why he won't be cracking open his Rocky boxset just yet...

HI, FRANK. ARE YOU IN DREAMLAND ABOUT FIGHTING FOR THE WORLD TITLE?

I was surprised to get the call to say the least. But when my promoter Frank Warren said we could get a fight with Fedor Chudinov for the WBA title, I jumped at the chance.

AS THE ITALIAN STALLION OF ENFIELD, IS THIS A REAL LIFE ROCKY STORY?

I guess with my Italian background you could say it's like a Rocky movie. But I won't be watching any of the Rocky boxset for inspiration; footage of Chudinov in action would probably be a better bet!

CHUDINOV HAS 13 FIGHTS TO HIS NAME. IS HE LIVING PROOF THAT IT'S NEVER TOO SOON TO CHALLENGE FOR A WORLD TITLE?

A lot of these top amateur guys are fighting for world titles very quickly because of the experience they have. If you've been training hard for 10 to 15 years, you'll have learned a hell of a lot. He's an accomplished fighter and I'll certainly have my work cut out.

YOU'VE JUMPED THE QUEUE AHEAD OF OTHER TOP CONTENDERS LIKE CALLUM SMITH AND ROCKY FIELDING. ARE THEY ON YOUR RADAR?

Of course, but I think we're all thinking the same thing. Why have a domestic fight when you can challenge for a world title, then bring the belt back to the UK and make those domestic showdowns even bigger?

WHAT'S IT LIKE TRAINING WITH STEVE COLLINS?

It's brilliant, as we have the same mentality. My training is mainly with his brother Paschal, who masterminded Kevin McBride's win over Mike Tyson. But with Steve around, two heads are always better than one.

STEVE STILL FANCIES HIMSELF AS A BIT OF A FIGHTER. HAVE YOU SPARRED HIM YET?

No we haven't sparring, but I've seen him on the pads and going a couple of rounds with guys in the white-collar scene and he's definitely still got it. Hopefully he won't want to challenge me after I win the title!

Steven Gerrard MY STORY:

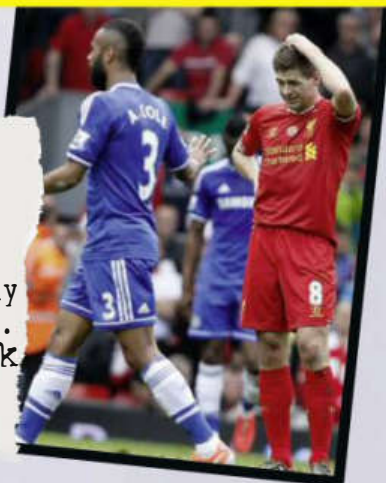

THE OUTTAKES!

*So, we know he can't text Rafa Benitez and he has El Hadji Diouf pegged as Liverpool's worst-ever signing, but here are the extracts from Stevie G's explosive new book that were left on the editing room floor

Well, we'd like to imagine anyway...*

The morning of the title-deciding game against Chelsea, I avoided serious injury by sidestepping a discarded banana skin on my way into the changing room. I thought to myself, "Thank God, my luck is in today"...

Everywhere I went, all I could hear was "Baa, baa, baa". In retrospect, hiding away on a sheep farm after blowing the title wasn't the best idea.

Luis chomped down on Ivanovic's arm. I knew this was going to happen when he didn't want his half-time orange.

The press kept on saying how me and Lamps were incompatible, but we made a perfect team, especially when I used him as my blocker on the way to the post-match buffet.

Maybe me and Rafa would've had a better relationship if I had accepted his invitation to visit his house for tapas and a Pedro Almodovar film. He only ever invited Xabi Alonso after that.

My career highlight was in the derby match when Jonjo swore at Sir Alex Ferguson and called him a grass. More people should follow his lead. After all, it wasn't like Fergie was a top, top manager, was it?

After Wazza had his hair transplant, I looked into the possibility of getting a forehead transplant. Sadly, no surgeon could increase its 2.4cm span...

WWE STARS TALK SMACK TO ZOO!

"I'd love to fight Rooney!"

Preston's finest fighter on calling out England's top goalscorer and offering his services to the nation's rugby squad...

HI, WADE! YOU'RE A BIG GUY WHO LOVES SPORT: ARE YOU FREE IF ENGLAND'S RUGBY WORLD CUP SQUAD HAVE AN INJURY CRISIS?

Ah, that would be amazing! People always told me I should be a second row, but when I was in school I hated playing in the scrum. I always wanted to be out on the wing, and be the new Jonah Lomu. We'll see what position England need me in!

HAVE ANY SPORTSMEN BEEN IN TOUCH ABOUT WWE?

Alex Corbisiero is a huge WWE fan and I know he'd love to get involved. He actually went as a guest of Triple H to check the WWE NXT facilities, so maybe one day we'll see him in the ring. Obviously all the Preston North End players are fans, too.

YOU CALLED WAYNE ROONEY OUT FOR DIVING AGAINST PRESTON. WHY NOT SETTLE IT AT NEXT YEAR'S WRESTLEMANIA?

I'd love it! He seemed very much up for it at first, but when the newspapers and media picked up on it, he went very quiet and wouldn't reply to me anymore!

HOW CLOSE WAS IT TO ACTUALLY HAPPENING?

I know our people tried to contact his people, but with him being a £50m-plus footballer, I'm not sure his insurance would allow him in the ring. But we can definitely get him involved in WrestleMania, he just needs to give us a shout!

LASTLY, ARE YOUR CHEAT MEALS AS LEGENDARY AS THE ROCK'S?

Luckily I have naturally skinny genetics, so when it comes to cheat meals, it's something I can be a little looser on. My favourite is 100 per cent curry – I love going home and getting a good curry. It's hard to find a decent curry house in the US!

“WrestleMania in London would be sick!”

The “Future of the business” chews the fat on life at the top of the organisation...

SO, SETH, HOW DID LIFE CHANGE WHEN YOU BECAME WORLD HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION?

Man, it's insane. This morning I had a signing at a toy store, then I had to find a tanning salon so I don't look like crap on the event, then I'm out in the evening talking about WWE 2K16. And tomorrow I'll be up again super early to do interviews from 5am. Then I have to do another WWE Live event on Friday night. So it's never-ending – the grind goes on, and on, and on, and on...

WHAT'S THE REACTION LIKE WHEN PEOPLE RECOGNISE YOU OUT AND ABOUT?

People are crazy! Some dude at the airport the other day asked me for a ride home. I was like, “Guy, why would I give you a ride anywhere? You came here to have me sign your little briefcase and now you're asking me for a ride? Are you out of your mind?”

I get some strange requests!

THERE ARE CALLS FOR WRESTLEMANIA TO BE HELD IN LONDON. WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE THAT?

Ah, that would be sick, man! London is incredible! One of my favourite memories of all time is fighting The Undertaker in London live on RAW. So I'd love to come back and beat The Undertaker in the main event!

SOUNDS GOOD! IF YOU COULD TAKE ON ANY EX-CHAMP, WHO WOULD IT BE?

Probably Shawn Michaels. He's the best in-ring performer who's ever lived and he's definitely someone I would be thrilled to match up with at some point.

#ZOOTwitties SEX TIPS!

This week...
Stacey Robyn
(@StaceyRobyn_)
answers your questions!

The stars of #ZOOTwitties tell you how to have even more no strings fun!

WHAT IS MOST GIRLS' FAVOURITE SEXUAL POSITION?

ANDREW, via email

I can't speak for every girl, but most girls I know love doggy style. The key thing is to mix it up, because missionary is so dull. We want to be surprised in bed, so put it this way: flicking through the Kama Sutra isn't a bad idea...

WHAT'S THE BEST WAY TO START INTRODUCING TOYS INTO THE BEDROOM WITH MY GIRLFRIEND?

ASH, via email

Don't jump in too quickly, in case she shoots it down straight away. Just mention in passing the idea of it, and if she's keen, take her to somewhere like Ann Summers and buy whatever takes her fancy. A bullet vibrator is always a good place to start.

WHAT'S THE BEST WAY TO TURN A WOMAN ON?

RYAN, via Twitter

If you're indoors and a DVD has finished, you need to ramp things up a notch. Make her feel sexy; compliment her, start playing with her hair, nibble on her ear – just show her how turned on you are! That's what does it for me, anyway...

DO YOU HAVE ANY SPECIAL TIPS FOR GIVING GIRLS A MASSAGE? AND WHAT'S LIKELY TO GET HER IN THE MOOD FOR ONE?

DAN, via email

One crucial tip: always use lots of massage oil! Personally, I like a nice, firm massage. Start off by dimming the lights so it's nice and romantic, and then simply ask if you can take care of her stress levels. I'm confident she won't say no!

Girls! Send your sexy selfies to @ZOOGirls with #ZOOTwitties in the message and you could star here!
